Going back in our old email history, it's the same thing almost on the same day. It's almost the same thing we both message back-and-forth to each other. It needs to change. The only way for that to happen is for you to tell me how you want it and the way you want it. We both can't keep on going like this. If you wouldn't mind, can you please tell me your way? And then we will do it your way. I can't keep guessing or assuming based on things that you write. I take what you write and say like gospel. It is confusing for both of us. I take you literally. Both of us have to be tired of the guessing game and assumptions. I will do as you need and want and do things your way, so if you could please tell me what your way is.
